DISCRIMINATING AGAINST THE SOUTH,

The Baton Rouge (La.) Advocate thus comments on the fact that the South has been left out of Prince Henry's Itinerary:

Now, we don't care a snap about being out out of the pleasure of worshiping royalty, but it shows the ent of thing. The emperor wanted his brother to get across with the American people. Americans arranged the with the American people. Americans arranged the program and located America north of Mason and Dixon's line grain and located America north of Misson and Discop's line. He will get a peep at Louisville and ston long enough in St. Louis to take a bath and change his clother. But this is as far south as America reaches. He will return home with a false view of this great country. He will see nathing but what has Hanna's dellar mark on it, and will miss the really picturesque and beautiful portions of the country which has the sweetest flowers the executive plants of the country which has picturesque and beautiful portions of the country which has the sweetest flowers, the most baimy climate, the most genial auntaine, the richest fields, the fairest landscapes, the handsomest women and the most gallant men * * The people of the North have long since come to the conclusion that the South is the tail of the American hite, and not much of a tail at that. We get the worst of it at every turn. We get the poorest mail service. We get the sonais and crumbs from the National table it matters not whether a democrat or a republican administration is in power. Once during a century we draw a capital peize, but this rarely happens. The North gets the ambusandors, while we are delighted with an occasional thir rate cursister. The North gets the consults generalship, while we fail heir to a few small consulates and consular agencies, mostly in Lato-American countries. The North gets the prohibitive duries, and we get benevolent reciprocities.

This ignoring of the South is a significant fact. No

This ignoring of the South is a significant fact. No characteristic of our Northern fellow citizens is more strongly marked than their self-assertiveness. In Europe the tendency to blow one's own horn is recognized as an American characteristic. It is recognized as an American characteristic because the Yankee has. by his push, succeeded in gaining the eye of Europe to such an extent that all Americans are supposed to be Yankees.

Our Northern fellow citizens live largely on the principle when you want a thing, claim it. They celebrate the landing of the Pilgrims in the Mayflower without noting the fact that Jamestown, in Virginia. was founded thirteen years earlier. They speak of the nation of which Washington, a Southerner, is properly called the father, as "the great Yankee nation." The Revolutionary war, largely waged by Southern troops on Southern territory, is remembered only by Bunker Hill, which wasn't even an American victory but which was fought in Massachusetts. The Declaration of independence is forgotten. It was written by Southerner. The Liberty Bell is remembered. It was rung in Philadelphia.

Throughout our history the same claims are made. All virtue resides in the North and all wisdom and patriotism and excellence of every sort are found home of the American eagle, and there only the starspangled banner, so called from a poem written by a awake town of about 1800 inhabitants, and was without a ful what the results will be. Southerner, unfuris itself freely to the breeze.

SECRETARY LONG'S FINANCIAL FANCIES.

Upon reading the speech of Hon. John D. Long, secretary of the navy, delivered not long since upon the secretary of the launching of the battleship Missouri, one is tempted to rejoice that Mr. Long is only secretary of the navy and does not control the financial policy of the country.

Industrial secretary a find of a brand new derby hat, a yest and a few other bits of raiment piled up on the banks of Buffalo bayou, the inference being that one more uniform that is new, and still more significant, that its number is 7 t-8, destroys all hope that any of the Houston newspaper men have committed suicide.—Bedamont Enterprise.

One of the interesting characters in congress is Representative Eddy of Minneacta. Mr. Eddy lives where jey winds and snow and other accessories of real winter weather are in evidence for several months in the year. Having in view, possibly, the blizzard which raged in Washington during the winter of 18:0, he always prepares bimself for emergencies when he comes to the capital. Among his most treasured possessions are a pair of Norwegian skis, each something like six feet in length. He uses these during every snowstorm, much to the interest of the crowds which his passage through the streets always attracts. He travels the two or three miles between his home and the capital in and open the rest door.
